

MAKE YOUR CAMPUS/NEIGHBOURHOOD A GREENER PLACE

Form an Environmental Committee

The Environmental Committee advocates sustainable development through greater environmental protection and management, addressing pressing issues that are affecting nature and people negatively. This also can be a community-building effort that encourages the community becomes more aware about the environmental issues and participate in contribution towards a solution.

Organise Kids Activities

Inspire advocacy by organising activities which allow children to appreciate what a clean and safe environment has to offer them. Include activities such as propagating DIY projects and art and craft using recycled materials while educating them about environmental conservation.

Clean Up Litter

Make a habit out of picking up litter wherever you go and become a good example towards others. Picking up litter could also help reducing managing cost of littering, where the funds can be used for something better for the community.

Create a Community Garden

Organise a public place in your own community to grow trees, flowers, fruits and vegetables. All work and decisions concerning the gardens are made by the community garden members. Such activities can positively impact the ability of people to access healthy food, encourage physical activities and through real social interactions could nourish participants' mental health.

Promote Recycling

Create a spot for you, your friends and your community to collect recyclable items which could help bring new function through repurposing the items or support buying recyclable products.

Support Local Sellers

Local businesses often get their sources from local purchases that doesn't involve a lot of transportation which could reduce traffic congestion and air pollution.

Plant Trees

Get your friends and family to join tree-planting activities around the campus or your neighbourhood. Trees give off oxygen that we need to breathe. Trees could reduce soil erosion and pollution and could help stop climate change.

Be a Volunteer

Join a club or association to raise awareness and cultivate good habits of environment conservation. You may even share your knowledge and experience in your family circle and neighbourhood or with your friends.
